The Whole Family Project

How does a child who is deaf, hard of hearing or nonverbal due to other conditions such as Down syndrome, Cerebral Palsy or childhood Apraxia learn to communicate?

Sign language skills can provide a much needed solution and help families better communicate with their children. The Whole Family Project provides sign language instruction to families who have a child living in the home with a hearing or speech disability who would benefit learning visual communication. Only infants and children up to 12 years are eligible for this program.

As with spoken language, the introduction of sign language is done through the parents as first teachers. The earlier the intervention, the better the outcome. Parents are taught signs they will need as their child grows, always staying ahead of the curve.

The Whole Family Project encourages anyone who regularly engages with the child be involved in the language sessions, which meet once a week for a minimum of 4 months.

The Goal of The Whole Family Project

Through individualized instruction in sign language, The Whole Family Project seeks to increase the ability of families to communicate with their children who are deaf or nonverbal, while increasing their knowledge and understanding of deafness, the deaf community and available options for their children.

How Does It Work?

The Whole Family Project provides each family with their own qualified tutor. These tutors will tailor the lessons to meet the unique communication needs of each family.

The Whole Family Project employs tutors with a wide variety of sign language experience and backgrounds. Tutors may be interpreters, family members of a deaf individual, or deaf themselves.
